The Rescue

1 Niamh woke before dawn, the morning the great storm broke.
2 From her window she watched the fishing boats in the harbour
3 straining against their ropes like nervous horses. Grey waves
4 hurled themselves at the sea wall in clouds of freezing spray.
5 Her grandfather, a fisherman for forty years, stood by the door
6 pulling on his heavy coat. "Stay inside today, Niamh," he said.
7 "The sea is angry, and an angry sea forgives nobody."
8 But Niamh had never been very good at staying inside. As soon
9 as his boots crunched away down the path, she wrapped a scarf
10 around herself and slipped out into the roaring wind.
11 Down by the old stone jetty, something dark caught her eye.
12 A young seal lay tangled in a length of torn fishing net, its
13 sides heaving, far too exhausted to struggle any longer.
14 Niamh forgot all about the storm. Kneeling on the wet stones,
15 she worked the stiff net loose, whispering so it would not panic.
16 Its dark eyes never left her face, frightened yet trusting.
17 At last the seal wriggled free, slipped into the water, and 18 paused, as if to thank her, before vanishing beneath the waves.
